Mr. Fleming is one of the members of the present Congress who has no interest in the approaching fail elections. He was defeated for renomination at the primaries in his district, although he claims to have polled a large majority of the popular vote. It appears that his district includes a number of counties. The nomination is determined by the number of counties carried by the leading candidate. Mr. Fleming may the carried the big counties but lost the little ones, because his opponent expended something like $10.000. In the round up at the primaries it was found that Mr. Fleming was two votes aby, hence his last of faith in the justness of the election lays.
